Upcoming international presentations

The following posters presenting the work of our trans-LINK Network have been accepted to the 24th World Conference on Health Promotion, Montreal (2022, May 15-19), with students Madelaine Coelho and Rachel Cheung, as well as former project coordinator, Joseph Friedman Burley, attending:

- Determining research priorities in gender-based violence against trans persons: Initial findings from a multistakeholder survey
- Strengthening partnerships to enhance trans-affirming care for sexual assault survivors: An initial evaluation of an intersectoral network of health and community service providers
- Promoting awareness to counter damaging attitudes, beliefs, and reactions related to sexual assault against trans people: #TRANSformativeKnowledge, a campaign for health and social service providers
- Advancing trans-affirming practice to improve the response to transgender sexual assault survivors

The posters will be made available on the trans-LINK WebPortal following the conference!

Research In Progress

Analyses of PARTNER surveys you completed over summer 2021 are under review in three journals and we look forward to sharing these open-access publications with you.

Welcome Hyuna Seo

Hyuna Seo (she/her) is an undergraduate student at McMaster University in the Bachelor of Health Sciences Program. As part of her program, she is working with the trans-LINK Network team to assess the uptake of our e-learning and in-person, "Providing Trans-Affirming Care to Sexual Assault Survivors", curricula: www.translinknetwork.com/curricula

SSHRC funding application

We have recently submitted an application for further funding from SSHRC to expand the trans-LINK Network nationally. We have been working with new partners across the country on this application and await the results in June 2022. Fingers crossed we are successful in this first stage of the application.
